What's the best job in the world? The tourism department of Australia has posted an ad online, looking for a caretaker the Great Barrier Reef. The caretaker will get about NT $ 3.5 million dollars, and all he/she has to do is explore the area and write a blog about it.

Clare Wang, 30, is the only Taiwanese among early 35,000 people. As part of the application, Wang sent in a video promoting herself for the job. In the video, Wang shows not only her great personality and interests in water sports, but also her language ability, both Chinese and English. She points out that there are one billion Chinese speakers in the world, which should make her the best choice for the job.

The tourism department of Australia has posted 50 of the videos on the website. The public can watch them and vote for their favorite until March 24. Clare has done a great job introducing herself to the world, and so far her video has come out on top by receiving about 150,000 votes, which are almost three times as many as her nearest competitor.

The top vote-getter and ten other people chosen by the tourism department will fly to Australia for interviews. The winner will be announced on May 6. The job begins on July 1 and lasts for half a year.
